

MURDER AND SUICIDE AT WOODSTOCK HOTEL

Luther Lounsbury Kills His Wife in Her Bed in the Hotel and Then Retires to the Hay Mow and Blows Off the Top of His Head—Jealousy the Cause of the Double Crime.

Mrs. Luther Lounsbury, cook at the Hotel Irvington at Woodstock, was found brutally murdered in her bedroom on the second floor of the hotel this morning at 6 o'clock, and three hours later the body of her husband was found in the haymow of the hotel barn with the top of his head blown off. He had killed his wife and then going out to the barn had shot himself. Jealousy was the cause of the double tragedy.

Mr. and Mrs. Lounsbury were both employed at the hotel, having gone there to work about two months ago. The wife did the cooking while her husband worked about the hotel and took care of the stock. They formerly lived in Stone Ridge and later came to Kingston, where the husband was employed at the Eagle Hotel. At one time he was also employed on the street force of the city. They were employed by Andrew Kohl of the City Hotel on Main street to work for the summer at the Hotel Irvington, of which he is the proprietor. The wife was of a genial nature and was between 40 and 45 years of age, while her husband was 56 years old. They have two boys, Charles, who is employed in the culinary department of the Eagle Hotel, and James, who is employed at Ashokan.

Employees of the hotel said this morning that the couple had had frequent quarrels lately. The woman was murdered by her husband about 5 o'clock, but the body was not discovered until an hour later.

Boards Heard Scuffling.

The couple occupied room 40 on the second floor. The adjoining rooms were occupied by Bernard Roach of this city, who is employed by the state highway department, who had room No. 42, and Jack V. Timony, his chum, who occupied room 41. Roach and Timony say that about 5 o'clock this morning they heard a scuffling in the next room and then a muffled scream, but they thought that it was the cry of a baby belonging to one of the boarders of the hotel and both turned over and went to sleep again.

The bedroom directly underneath the room occupied by the Lounsburies was occupied by Charles Kohl, Jr., and William Kuntz, two young men stopping at the hotel. They also heard scuffling and the muffled scream. About 5:35 they heard Lounsbury come down stairs and pass through the hall and go out doors, evidently to the barn. They thought nothing more of the matter and fell asleep.

About 6 o'clock William Colburn, the manager of the hotel, went down stairs and found that no fire had been started and that breakfast was under way. He remarked to the waitress, Mrs. Lizzie Hoyer, that he had heard a muffled scream and that the cook must have left them. He started fire and as Mrs. Lounsbury did not yet make an appearance in the kitchen, Mrs. Hoyer went up stairs and knocked on the door. She received no reply. She returned down stairs and told Mr. Colburn that no one answered. Later she became anxious and going up stairs again she opened the door, and looked in. Horrified at what she saw she slammed the door shut and rushed down stairs and told Mr. Colburn that Mrs. Lounsbury had been murdered.

An investigation of the room led to the finding of the body lying between the bed and the wall, face downward on the floor. Clothing had been thrown over the body and the walls and floor were spotted with blood. Dr. Downer of Woodstock was summoned, and finding the woman dead and her husband missing he immediately called up the sheriff's office and related the finding of the body of the murdered woman. Under Sheriff Hornbeck immediately sent out a general alarm and in less than twenty minutes deputies all over the county had received a description of Lounsbury.

Husband Found in Hay Mow.

After the discovery of the murdered woman's body Deputy Sheriff Albert Cashdollar of Woodstock was the first county official on the scene. He immediately instituted a search for the weapon used in killing the woman and also for the missing husband.

It was thought that the husband might be hiding in the barn and Cashdollar and young Kohl went out and searched the premises. Nothing was found disturbed on the first floor and they went up in the haymow, where they found Lounsbury lying flat on his back with the top of his head blown off. He presented a gruesome sight. This was about 9 o'clock.

Had Used Shotgun.

Evidently Lounsbury had made every preparation for carrying out his crime undisturbed and had made preparation for ending his own life. He had loaded a shotgun and standing up had placed the barrel to his head and then had pulled the trigger which was found later in the gun empty. The shot gun was of modern make and was a twelve gauge. The force of the explosion of the shell was such that it not only tore off half of the man's head but it scattered the brains on the beams in the haymow where they were later gathered up and placed in a bottle.

What Led Up to Tragedy.

From the questioning of Sheriff Shultis it was learned that the couple had had quarrels for some time past. Lounsbury was jealous of his wife but spoke to another man. Saturday evening it was said that he asked his wife to come out and sit in the swing with him but she refused to go.

Wished She Was Home.

Sunday afternoon the murdered woman confided to the waitress, Mrs. Hoyer, that she wished she was home that night with her mother.

Coroner Takes Charge.

Coroner Lee H. Breithaupt of Pheola was notified and motored to the hotel and took charge of the remains. His verdict was in the case of Mrs. Lounsbury "murder," and in the case of her husband, "suicide."

Hotel Filled With Boarders.

The hotel at the present time is filled with summer boarders but none of them realized that a woman had been murdered and that a man had killed himself until about 8 o'clock this morning.

Dr. Downer, who was summoned, took charge of the room and with Deputy Sheriff Cashdollar kept the morbid crowd out while the physician made an examination of the woman's wound and then locked the room up to await the arrival of the authorities.

The Hotel Irvington is the only hotel in Woodstock and is located on the main street and is a popular summer resort.

Where the Woman Was Murdered.

The bedroom in which the woman's body was found is a room about 10 by 12 feet. The bed takes up a large part of the room. The body lay between the bed and the wall.

When found the body lay face downward in a pool of blood which had splashed against the sidewalk and even drops of blood had fallen into the bottom of a pair of tan ties belonging to the woman which stood at the foot of the bed. She was still dressed in her night clothes.

Her jewelry lay untouched on the bureau and nothing had been removed. Evidently the husband had carefully planned the crime. When they awoke this morning he had grasped her by the throat which accounted for the muffled cry of alarms she uttered. Finger prints were plainly visible on her neck even several hours after the murder. One eye was completely discolored due however to the hemorrhage brought on by the blow on the forehead which had killed her.

In the center of her temple was a deep wound which resembled a bullet wound and was about an inch in depth. No bullet, however, was found in the wound which was probed by Dr. Downer in a search for the cause of death. Her temple had been crushed in and death was due to a fractured skull.

The Murderer Had Written Letters.

Two letters written by the murderer were found on the bureau. Both were undated. One was addressed to his son Charles at the Eagle Hotel and the other to Andrew Kohl, proprietor of the hotel. The letter to the son stated among other things that he would find money in his trunk which should be used to bury the man and his wife. The letter to Kohl, according to the authorities, gave the name of the man of whom the murderer was jealous. The authorities did not disclose the man's name.

The letters must have been written either on Sunday or a day or so before as evidently the murderer had not had time to write both letters after he had killed his wife. Or maybe they had been written but a few minutes before he killed his wife. The solution of course will probably never be known.

Weapon Not Found.

A thorough search of the bedroom failed to disclose the weapon Lounsbury had used in killing his wife. From the wounds it was evident that it had been an instrument with a sharp point as the deep hole in the forehead was such as could be inflicted with an ice pick. What the murderer did use to kill his wife is not known at the present time. He did not leave it in the room but had evidently taken it along with him on his way to the barn.

No Shot Heard.

A queer feature of the affair was the fact that no one seems to have heard the sound of the shot gun when Lounsbury pulled the trigger. Deputy Sheriff Cashdollar after finding the murderer's body made a careful search of the premises for the weapon the murderer had used in killing his wife but was unsuccessful.

Found The Money.

The deputy sheriff, however, found the money mentioned by Lounsbury to his son Charles in the murderer's trunk where he had written it could be found. It amounted to $27.01 and was turned over to the son who had hastened to the scene of the crime after he had been notified of his mother's death.

Bought Gun Few Days Ago.

It was brought out by the questioning of Sheriff Shultis that a few days ago Lounsbury had asked Manager Colburn to advance him $5 as he wanted to make a purchase. He did not state what he was going to buy and no one seems to have known that Lounsbury had purchased a gun. The murderer had evidently hid the weapon in the haymow along with a box of cartridges he had purchased with the gun. The weapon had never been discharged before and was new. Only one shell had been taken from the box of cartridges which was found later in the gun empty. The shot gun was of modern make and was a twelve gauge. The force of the explosion of the shell was such that it not only tore off half of the man's head but it scattered the brains on the beams in the haymow where they were later gathered up and placed in a bottle.

SWISS ESTIMATE OF RUSSIAN LOSSES

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Berlin, Aug. 9.—(By wireless.)—Swiss estimates fixing the Russian losses at 3,000,000 men, with the prediction that it will take two years to drill near forces to replace the active troops and older reserves, are emphasized by the Overseas News Agency in a statement issued today.

"Among the innumerable press utterances in neutral countries," says the statement, "that of the Lausanne Gazette which is anti-German, is most interesting. It says that the fall of Warsaw is of gigantic importance because it is proof that Russia lacks offensive strength, having lost about 2,000,000 men composed of the total of active troops and older reserves and having left only hordes which it will take two years to organize, equip and drill."

"Mail reports from St. Petersburg (Petrograd) show that in the debate in the Duma after the ministers had made their speech, the government was fiercely attacked and insulted. It was charged with incompetency, corruption and treachery by M. Tochehidz, the Socialist radical leader."

"He asserted that if no radical and immediate change were possible, Russia would completely degenerate."

"The state in specific terms makes all persons and corporations engaging in the jitney business, as defined, common carriers and subject to all provisions of law as such. The present applications to the supreme court are under section 57 of the public service commissions law which authorizes the commission to apply to the court for injunctions to restrain violations of this law."

Not having the exact change he went to jail to consider the evil of his ways for fifteen days.

GERMANS SPLIT RUSSIAN LINE

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Vienna, via Berlin, wireless, Aug. 9.—Austro-German troops have pierced the Russian front on the Wieprz river north of Lublin and the Slav troops, dividing and retreating are threatened with disaster.

News of the splitting of the Russian forces arrived here in a brief official dispatch from Austrian headquarters today. It stated that the Teutonic troops were pressing forward in the gap that had been opened, while on both flanks the pursuing forces were inflicting heavy losses on the Russians.

Austrian correspondents at the front amplify the official report of the breach in the Russian front. They state that the Austrian troops under Archduke Ferdinand are advancing on a front of 22 miles between Lubartow and Baranow. With a breach this wide in the Russian lines, they assert the Austrian center will dash toward Sidelce, hoping to capture that important railway center and cut off the escape of 200,000 Russians.

They estimate the number of Russian prisoners captured in the last 36 hours at 16,000 men.

GERMANS BEGIN OFFENSIVE ACTION

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Paris, Aug. 9.—A general offensive, all along the line on the western battle-front has been commenced by the Germans. It is announced in an official communique issued by the French war office today.

The fighting is particularly violent north of Souchez, in Artois, where the French positions were bombarded with extreme violence. Attempts of the Germans to leave their trenches to deliver an infantry attack with the bayonet were repulsed, the war office says.

Strong artillery and infantry attacks are being launched by the Germans against the Belgian, British and French positions.

The general offensive in the west has developed from two local movements, directed against the Belgian positions on the Yser and the French positions west of Verdun in the Argonne forest.

Terrific artillery fire is being directed against the allied trenches all along the lines. Redoubts, block-houses, cities, observation posts, wire entanglements and, in fact, every obstruction that might give shelter is being shelled by the German guns.

Assaults are being delivered by the Teutonic forces all the way from the North Sea to Lower Alsace.

Before the regular daily communique was issued the French war office gave out a statement denying claims of victories recently made by the German general staff. According to this statement, all German attacks in the Argonne up to August 7 were repulsed with heavy losses except at one point where a portion of a trench was lost. The statement declares that the number of prisoners claimed by the Germans is three times the authentic number. Denial is also made of German claims in the Vosges and it is said that no French aeroplane was shot down there by the Germans as claimed in Berlin.

LETTER FROM ERIE FLOOD DISTRICT

The many friends of Miss Julia M. Traver, who spent several months in Kingston last year, and who has been assistant editor of the Erie Dispatch since leaving here, will be interested in the following letter, received here, giving a brief account of the recent flood at Erie.

Erie, Pa., Aug. 6, 1915.

My dear
Your note of inquiry just received and I hasten to assure you that I came through the flood all right. I was in the office during all the worst of it. The main part of the misguided or misdirected creek ran right under my window. Across the street was a little red cottage that went to pieces like a pile of matches, while on the opposite corner a large one story frame building fell with a smash and part of it drifted up against our building. The little red house smashed against a brick two story building next and crushed in the side before going to pieces.

Both French and Twelfth streets—the streets upon which our office faces—for about two hundred feet each way, were torrents, the water running about ten feet deep and at a rate of about twenty-five miles an hour. Singularly enough, I never got frightened for a moment.

About ten o'clock our circulation manager brought the delivery automobile into the alley at the shallow end of the flood and we went down a ladder and into the machine. From there we were taken about twenty feet to a garage where they thought we could get through and over State street to the unflooded part of the city. We found, however, four feet of wild water banked up against the front doors of the garage, and had to wait until the flood went down. Then the proprietor of the place took my assistant and myself home in a machine. We were really in more danger in the garage than we were in the office, but we were in no real danger all night, as far as I could see, unless the building had fallen in, which seemed to me unlikely, as it had a solid concrete foundation and first story.

We had some very hot weather for a day or two before the storm. There are about two hundred families homeless, most of them having had everything they owned destroyed or carried away. So far it is known that 26 people lost their lives.

This is all I can write now, because I am covering the flood and have three or four people I want to interview this afternoon, about their experiences. Thanks very much for the inquiry. I thought I would send you this note now to set your mind at rest.

Sincerely yours,

JULIA M. TRAVER.

GERMAN ARMY CLOSING THE TRAP

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Berlin, Aug. 9.—The gap in the iron circle which the Austro-German forces are forging around the Russian army in the sector of Warsaw is now only 75 miles wide and each day sees it lessened.

German troops that crossed the Vistula near Warsaw are advancing while the Russians are withdrawing their forces from Praga, to which point they retired after evacuating the Polish capital.

With Serock, at the junction of the Narew and Bug rivers, in possession of the army of Gen. von Scholtz, the Teutonic forces are now driving against the Russian line south of Wyszokow.

German and Austrian howitzers are reducing the forts at Novo Georgievsk as methodically as they did at Namur and Liege in the early days of the war. Only six of the forts defending the Vistula river fortress are now tenable.

There has been no lessening in the vigor of the Austro-German offensive since the fall of Warsaw. If anything it has been increased. With the exception of the district immediately south of Riga progress is reported for the Austro-German forces from every part of the eastern battle front. North of the Eckenau river General von Buelow weakened his forces in order to strengthen the army driving against the defenses of the Warsaw-Petrograd east of Ponewjesh. Consequently the German Uhlands had to give ground slightly before superior forces.

A steady advance northward is being maintained by the Austro-German forces of Archduke Joseph Ferdinand and Field Marshal von Mackensen, that are driving northward from the Lublin-Cholm line. Austro-Hungarian troops have reached the bend of the Wieprz river, 30 miles north of Lublin, and are now fighting to force a passage.

The Austro-Hungarians on the Wieprz had occupied Lubartow. The use of gas fumes has contributed largely to the success of the German armies northeast of Warsaw. Weather conditions have favored the use of gases and they have been used extensively over a wide front. This has proved a great help in conserving the ammunition supplies of the Teutonic forces. The Russians have also attempted the use of poisonous fumes, but lacking proper equipment, have been unsuccessful.

A great deal of damage has been done to Warsaw by the Russian shells which were thrown across the Vistula, but this is being repaired as quickly as possible.

Optimism is at the high water mark throughout Germany as a result of the great victories in the eastern theater of war and numberless messages of congratulations are being sent to Marshal von Hindenburg

GOOD BEERS

THE average consumption of beer is greater than tea, coffee, milk, soft drinks or any other beverage known to mankind. It contains the most food value. The temperate use of such fine brews as has no ill effect. They are beverages of absolute purity. Their use or abuse is optional with the consumer and they contain only about 3 per cent of alcohol. On the average all other stimulating drinks are 15 times stronger than beer in alcoholic contents.

HOME RULE IN EVERY VARIETY

A comical situation exists in the constitutional convention over the question of home rule. There are fifty-six cities in the state and over four hundred incorporated villages. The representatives of most of them insist upon the new constitution preserving to each one of them those governmental features which heretofore they have had. The convention's committee of which Ex-Mayor Low is chairman, after being admonished by Senator Root that it was impossible to satisfy these local whims, and that a broad amendment should be reported, making all municipalities subject to general laws regardless of special features, reported such an amendment. No sooner was it presented than the radical members of the committee framed and presented a minority report greatly to the amusement of those delegates who are of the opinion that it is the duty of a constitutional convention to frame a constitution for a state, not for a single city or village. An illustration of the extravagance to which small localities go is afforded by the fact that one incorporated village of less than one thousand inhabitants demanded that the constitution be amended to meet its particular wants. The delegates are constantly in receipt of letters making similar demands. Some of them are of a serious character, others are framed to show the superior smartness of the writers, who immediately publish them in their local newspapers. A majority, however, state in language not infrequently abusive, that if the delegate to whom the letter is addressed ever expects political preferment hereafter, he is doomed to disappointment unless he secures the carrying out of the view of his correspondent. One wag in the convention, after opening his morning mail announced that he was politically dead for the eleventh time that day if his correspondent had the power he claimed to have to smash him.

Proposed Board of Pardons.

The New York Herald, pointing out that men of the professional and personal standing of Judge Clearwater and Louis Marshall favor an amendment to the constitution creating a board of pardons, and indicating its disapproval of the existing situation which makes it possible for a district attorney who prosecutes a man to be the sole person who can pass upon his application for clemency, suggests that a commission composed of such men as Clearwater and Marshall might well be created by constitutional amendment as a commission to deal with the prevention and punishment of crime on a broad scale, having the power of a state board of parole, and a board of pardons. Judge Clearwater is quoted as saying that notwithstanding his advocacy of a board of pardons, he is of the opinion that 97 per cent of the men who are confined in state prisons belong there, and should remain there, but that he also is of the belief that all applications for pardon should receive that consideration in the state of New York which they receive in thirty-one of the states of the union.

BACK TO THE FOLD.

The Rev. Frederick M. Davenport, who was the Progressive candidate for Governor last year, announced at Albany Friday night that he intends to enroll as a Republican and in his opinion the time has come when the fight for Progressive principles should be conducted within the Republican party lines.

Davenport's declaration was made after a conference of twenty-nine Bull Moose, where he was conspicuous by his absence, had decided the Bull Moose were not in favor of returning to the Republican ranks. "As the result of what I have observed during the last six months in the west as well as in the east," said Mr. Davenport, "I believe the time has come for constructive effort in the politics of the country. In many western states, and in most of the states in the east, there is no real Progressive strength left at all."

This is the nearest admission yet made by any Progressive leader that the work of the Progressives has not been constructive; until now they have unanimously denied that their intentions or policy were merely destructive. Davenport's admission is candid. It is a fact which everyone knew but nobody expected it to be admitted by a Progressive leader.

The Progressive situation resolves itself into a simple question of whether the lately enrolled Progressive and Independent voters shall vote for constructive, Republican statesmanship or permit continued Democratic mismanagement through voting for the hand-picked candidates of Colonel Roosevelt, George W. Perkins and a few other self-constituted bosses. The Progressive Party has struck the rock of enlightenment political judgment, but it is doubtful if Davenport is influenced by such judgment.

He is the kind of political leader who wants nobody else on the stage while he is there. He needs room for his arms to swing and a spotlight to display his form, and officers should be present to keep the audience quiet while he is talking. If anyone becomes restive, it must be because he has not been sufficiently educated to appreciate the speaker or else the restiveness is part of a plot to discredit him. He is not reaping rewards by being a Progressive and as all indications point to a return of the rank and file of Progressive voters to the Republican party, he has decided to pose as their leader and claim a reward for bringing them home. He is willing to lead either the advance or the retreat provided the pictures will show him as leader and the eyes of a straggling army fixed on him.

Should Davenport be rewarded? He left the Republican party at a critical period and by every means sought to defeat it. Do Republicans owe him anything? Progressive voters had been returning to the Republican ranks two years before he discovered the fact but now he would place himself at their head as their leader in the homeward march. Do Progressives owe him a debt? But Davenport has outlined a policy for the Republicans.

The original Prodigal Son had a calf killed in his honor and a ring placed on his finger, but he did not ask for them; much less did he demand to be allowed to revise the guest list or discharge the servants who had been faithful to his father during his own absence. His modesty in this respect has made humanity tolerant of the Prodigal Son during succeeding generations. If he had demanded I need to the property and asked the neighbors to turn in and build a state road in front of his premises, would not history have been different? The Rev. Frederick M. Davenport should bear the lesson in mind. Perhaps he has been traveling so long with the Colonel and Perkins that he has forgotten his early training.

As for the rank and file of Progressives, they will continue to march homeward, with or without Davenport, whose utterances are interesting merely as showing the state of mind of the Progressive "real leader."

We had felt called upon to criticize Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels so frequently that we jumped at the chance to commend him when he announced the appointment of a consulting board on inventions and ideas headed by Thomas A. Edison. We thought we might have misjudged the fellow and that he was quite a man after all. Now it has leaked out that Josephus was not the author of the plan at all, but that it originated in the mind of a young man in the office of Assistant Secretary Franklin D. Roosevelt. As the young man is a Republican he stands very little chance of getting the reward to which he is entitled, since everything good is reserved for "deserving Democrats," as Bryan calls them. So our original estimate of Josephus goes, although we still praise him for being able to act on a good idea when it is presented to him.

One of the strangest performances we have observed in a long time is the publication by Secretary Redfield of a letter showing that on July 14 he warned the owners of the Eastland that the vessel was dangerous. Knowing this fact, it puts the Secretary in a bad light. He had no right to permit the boat to remain in commission when he was aware that she might flop over at any time. Taking chances with thousands of human lives is poor practice when all that is to be gained is profit for the owners of a vessel. Worst of all is the farcical way in which the catastrophe is being investigated. The prospects now are that nobody will be punished or even lose his job. Consequently, there will be nothing to deter other owners from risking other thousands of lives. It is a disgrace to the Administration.

OUR IDEALS.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

It is too much to expect of life and of human beings that no dark, troublous days shall come, no failures mark our progress but the clouds certainly are denser, the stumbles more grievous and hurtful when we put away our little dreams of what we want to be and to do, those ideals big with hope and ambition that draw us on, in spite of the falls.

And it seems to me that one of the finest, strongest, bravest things to do after a fall big in its consequences, so big that the whole world would know if the whole world were watching, is to pick oneself up and start all over again, building ideals anew as if nothing had happened. And it is courageous and splendid, the more, because the stumblers know that the faith of watchers is shattered. We know and read of men and women like that, and some of us count them real heroes. When Victor Hugo created the character of "Jean Valjean" he showed the hand of a master in portraying a man who stumbled most grievously, paid the bitter price of his falls and still reached up to the best that was in him. And, his art aside, one thing that has made "Les Miserables" so appealing to the heart of the world is admiration for the unbroken courage that followed the galley-slave down to the end.

And whether our ideals are of work or of the great game of life and the way we shall play it, they are not too many, but too few, that we cherish. It marks an unhappy day when we have rounded the turn that shuts out those beckoning lights; for so long as they remain hidden from view, with nothing to point the clearer way, how can we hope to reach the fine atmosphere of best endeavor, away from the clouds of indifference and hopelessness? And never let us persuade ourselves that we have grown too experienced, too old, too something, to keep them before us, for when ideals begin to topple over or just be forgotten or when failures prompt the plaint, "What's the use?" the danger-sign is up and it is time to rebuild. That they are rarely reached is not a confession of failure, for the nearer we come to them, the higher up they go; and though we may follow from afar, we cannot help but gain a bit. We may not, indeed, we do not, always practice the theories of life or of work or of play that we most fondly urge, but we come nearer the mark than if we were stripped of all beautiful visions and notions.

Most of us dream of success in all our undertakings, but if we are indifferent how or where our feet are planted on the ladder we make a sorry figure when once we "attain the topmost round;" and it is a strained, unsatisfying quality we get, after all. It is said that men who pile up their millions in "big business" must long ago have laid aside their ideals, if ever they had any. And, probably, in the main that is true; but don't you suppose that some of them know, down in their hearts where the real selves live, that their success has brought half the happiness they would have known if, running through their hopes and plans, their ideals had stood out fairly high? Because the time comes to most of us, sooner or later, when we reckon a bit thoughtfully and seriously with that big word, success, and we know that it is not mixed up with dollars and cents half so much as with our manner of dealing with the folk nearest our hearts and with the others who make up our world. And when the sun sinks low in our little horizon it is tremendously comforting to have the one assurance, if no other, that not a person in the world is the unhappier, the poorer in mind or in purse, because of our passing his way.

But that means that ideals must be kept sort of clear and wide, for, to know, ideals that do not serve to make us more companionable and loving in the home, more friendly on the big outside and more just in our dealings with all—such ideals are not worth building at all.

And happy the man, happy the women whose childhood was spent in a home where ideals had not slipped away, for while little folk only feebly grasp at the right and wrong of things themselves, conscientious effort is not lost upon them and they follow pretty closely in the footsteps of the grown folk about them. Exhibitions of truthfulness, sincerity and honor last long in their minds and help constitute the steady forces needed to guide every one of us along the only path that will remain bright and attractive down to the last turn.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

"What makes you think your tailor is a crank?" "He's been writing me threatening letters."—Buffalo Express.

"The population of our town is certainly growing." "How many people in your town now?" "There ain't any more than there were last year, but the children are a whole lot bigger."—Houston Post.

"Bathing-suits are one-third off this week. Next week, though, they may be one-half off." "Then buy," suggested her husband. "One-third off is bad enough."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

For a little while they were between the devil and the deep sea. The woman got her some dresses made, and went down to the latter. But the man, after some hesitation, went to the former.—Puck.

"Do you study a subject thoroughly before you make a speech on it?" "Not too thoroughly," replied Senator Sorghum. "You're liable to find there's so much about it that you don't know that you'll get discouraged."—Washington Star.

First Trawler Skipper (to friend who is due to sail by next tide): "Are ye takin' any precautions against these submarines, Jack?" Second Skipper—"Ay, although I've been in the habit of carryin' my bits o' bawbees wi' me, I went an' bankit this mornin', an' I'm no takin' na beat oiksins or my new sea boots." First Skipper—"Oh, you're a' richt then. Ye'll hae practically naethin' tae lose but yer life."—Punch.

Canned.

Mrs. Fletcher went up to the city one morning to do some shopping. She was looking for some house furnishings, and went to a large department store.

Walking up to a tall, blond floor-walker, who was walking slowly down the aisle in a languid and elegant manner, she said:

"Will you please tell me where I can see the candelabra?"

"All canned goods two counters to the right," replied the official guide, briefly.—Harper's Magazine.

Our American Way.

War correspondents, even if they cannot get to the front, have some odd and interesting experiences. This truth is recalled by an instance mentioned in the Buffalo Commercial: "Franklin Matthews represented a newspaper during the Russo-Japanese war, and one day succeeded in breaking through the news censorship and reaching Field Marshal Oyama. The interview was brief but extremely courteous, and the jubilant correspondent hurried back to prepare the story for his paper. In the course of it he used this expression: 'Marshal Oyama is a brick.' The letter was duly passed along to the official translator, and presently Captain Kanaka, of the Marshal's personal staff called upon the correspondent. 'Marshal Oyama presents his compliments,' said the captain suavely, 'and regrets to inform the esteemed correspondent that his honorable letter cannot be forwarded as written.' 'Why, what's wrong with it?' cried the amazed war scribe. Captain Kanaka explained with polite gravity: 'Marshal Oyama,' he said, 'objects to having the great American public regard him as baked mud.' For that is what the extremely literal translator had made of 'brick.'"

Plenty of Choice.

Will Irwin, the war correspondent, supported at the new Circle's in London recently with Lincoln Springfield, the well-known wit and editor. "Lord Kitchener," said Mr. Irwin, "told a young woman some years since that if he ever married, his choice would be a German widow." "Well, he's making plenty of them now," chuckled Mr. Springfield.—London Times.

An Easy Choice.

Bishop Sanford Olmsted said at a dinner party in Denver: "The charge that the church is governed by mercenary motives is an insidious one. I think this charge was best answered by the prison chaplain."

"A chaplain was addressing a congregation of prisoners, many of whom had given more than one proof that they were profiting by his visits. But there was a certain rough, brutal-looking fellow who always scoffed and sneered. And today this fellow, when the chaplain greeted him, said:

"No, I don't want to shake hands

BERLIN GOSSIP OF WAR FEATURES

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Berlin, August 9.—New potatoes from the fields of conquered Belgium are now sold in large quantities in the public markets of the German capital. The potatoes are of excellent quality and in great demand. They sell at 20 pfennings (5 cents) a pound, but this price is not too high at this time of the year.

Father and Son Killed in Battle.

The latest list of German killed and wounded soldiers contains the names of Ferdinand Tausch, as reservist of Rotwell, Germany, and his son, Christian. Father and son were killed in the same battle and almost at the same moment near Arras in northern France.

Former French Soldier Receives Iron Cross.

Dr. Wick chief-surgeon of the military hospital at Miechowitz, Upper Silesia, writes to the "Berliner Tageblatt":

"A few days ago a badly wounded non-commissioned officer, Karl Winter of Cassel, was brought here. When I examined the soldier I found his body covered with French tattoo signs. At first he was not willing to disclose the origin of these 'Decorations,' but finally he consented to talk and he told me that he had served five years in the French foreign legion.

"After finishing his apprenticeship as a mechanic he went to France six years ago. In Nancy he fell into the hands of recruiting officers, who induced him to enlist in the foreign legion. He was sent to Algeria and found the conditions there almost unbearable. Repeatedly he tried to desert, but he was recaptured and severely punished.

"There was no escape for him and he had to serve his full term of five years. Then he returned to Cassel where he presented himself to the military authorities. He had to enter the German army and was assigned to the infantry regiment V. Wittich. Shortly afterwards the war broke out and the former French soldier went to the front with his regiment. He soon distinguished himself by bravery and was promoted. In one of the battles in northern France he saved a German detachment from annihilation by his courage. For this act of heroism he was decorated with the iron cross.

"When Mackensen began his great drive on Galicia the former legionnaire was sent to the eastern front. He fought before Przemyśl and Lemberg and took part in the bloody combats along the Bug river in southern Poland, near Sokal he was struck down by a fragment of a Russian shell. His wounds are so serious that he will not be able to return to the front after he leaves the hospital."

An Evening Concert in the Trenches.

The bloody trench-war on the western front is not without humorous incidents. This is shown by a letter of Lieutenant Erich Holz, a former German law-student. The young officer writes to the "Burschenschaftliche Blätter," a periodical devoted to the interest of the student-fraternities:

"Our opponents on the British line near Ypres resemble the 'Anthropological Congress' of Hagenbeck. Ghurkas, negroes from Africa and other exotic savages are huddled together in the trenches with Irishmen, Scotchmen and Canadians. Real Englishmen we seldom see, because the genuine Britisher stays at home and lets others fight for him.

"To express our contempt for the hordes from Asia and Africa we arrange a unique concert every evening. The feature of these concerts is always the 'Umbo-Song' a composition of my own. Imitating negro drums the chorus sings in a monotonous rhythm: 'Umbo, umbo, umbo,' while the leader in a shrill tenor, accompanied by clapping of hands, shouts a long string of silly words, like 'Oh Belladonna, watchgangalligall, gingangu, gingangum.' Then we start the 'Wacht am Rhein' or 'Deutschland ueber Alles' and we wind up by shouting: 'Hurrah!'

"These concerts never fail to make our opponents, whose nearest trench is only about fifteen yards from ours, real mad. They also begin to sing and we have Homeric scolding-duels. 'You Dutchmen are all crazy! Come over and let us lick you!' the English and their multicolored Allies shout to us and we answer in similar language. 'The battles of words are sometimes kept up for a whole hour, until both sides are hoarse and tired. Then suddenly the stillness of night falls on the trenches again and the thunder of big guns before Ypres and Arras remind us of the bloody seriousness of the situation.'

Her Idea.
"Ma, your bank account is overdrawn."
"What does that mean, pa?"
"Simply this. You've written checks for $15 more money than was in the bank."
"The idea! If $15 will break the bank I'd find another one to do business with. I supposed they had thousands of dollars on hand all the time."—Detroit Free Press.

Outlawed.
"How about paying me for that suit I made for you two years ago?" asked the tailor.
"You surely can't expect me to pay for that suit," said the impetuous young man. "Why, it's all out of style."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Somewhere Around.
"I never see her with her husband. Has she lost him?"
"I don't know. Some people seem to think she has merely misplaced him."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

POULTRY FACTS

FREE POULTRY FROM VERMIN

Lousy Chicks or Turkeys Are More Apt to Be Affected With Gapes or Some Other Ailment.

Chicks are growing fast these days and lice are also making rapid growth. The most essential thing at this season is to keep young poultry free from lice. They cannot thrive with vermin sapping their strength, and lousy chicks or turkeys are more likely to be affected with gapes, or some other ailment.

In looking for lice examine the little wings and around the vent. Between the long wing feathers of the little Leghorn chick or young turkey is a favorite hiding place for lice where they sap the life from the little birds until they haven't enough strength to hold up their wings. For head lice on chicks, or the ticks that prey on young turkeys look upon the neck, pushing back the feathers carefully until you reach the top of the head. A little pure lard or sweet oil on the head, neck and wings and around the vent may be used to advantage, but too much will kill the lice and chicks both.

One can make his own insect powder after the following recipe: One pint of gasoline; two-thirds of a pint of crude carbolic acid, stir thoroughly into five pounds of fine road dust, let dry for an hour and put in an airtight receptacle. This powder is death to head and body lice and harmless to chicks and poult. Try to be careful when using any insect powder—see that none gets in their eyes. Dust the mother hen when you turn her out in the morning. If this is done at night the dust gets into the eyes of the chicks and makes them uncomfortable. Some say the powder getting into the eyes will cause blindness.

MILK FOR GROWING CHICKENS

Indiana Station Expert Finds Its Use Quite Valuable in Aiding Digestion of Other Foods.

W. B. Anderson of the Indiana experiment station has carried through two tests to determine the value of skim milk for growing chickens. In the first test two lots of chicks, consisting of ten Plymouth Rocks and ten Houdans, were fed all they would eat of a mixture of crushed corn, bran and ground oats, 2-1-1.

Both lots were also fed cracked bone, cabbage and lettuce, and the amount of these articles consumed is not recorded.

The two lots received the same treatment except that lot 2 was given all the skim milk they would eat in addition to the grain ration.

The test was continued for eight weeks. Lot 1 consumed 179.8 pounds of grain, and the average weekly gain per chick was 2.62 ounces. Lot 2 consumed 217.3 pounds of grain and 90.4 pounds of skim milk, and the average weekly gain per chick was 4.46 ounces.

The conclusion drawn was to the effect that the use of the milk was very profitable, as it aided in the digestion of the other foods, resulting in increased consumption and faster growth.

This test was duplicated during the summer with practically identical results, and we may assume that skim milk, whenever available, is especially valuable for growing chicks.

Put Mites to Flight.
Creolin, or any of the numerous disinfectants made up largely of it, will put mites to flight. To treat the roosts and interior of the hen house with this or a similar disinfectant, take an old shoe brush and fasten it on to a sawed-off broom handle, then apply the liquid with this homemade brush.

Rye as Chick Food.
Rye is an excellent chick food, but in summer the chick that is penned will relish lettuce and Swiss chard more than rye. One can sow these thick. Cut in small bits and the chicks will soon clean up the pile of green stuff.

On Guard.
Philo—Did you say window or widow? Sopher—I said widow, but they are both very much alike. Philo—How so? Sopher—Well, you see, when I get near either of them I always look out.—Judge.

ALL SUMMER GARDEN.

There Should Be a Succession of Crops Through the Growing Season.

The way to have an abundance of the best of good things from the garden is to grow a succession of crops through the growing season, says a contributor to Farm Progress. In the average farm home garden great effort is made early in spring to have all the soil prepared and planted, but later in the season the crops are neglected and a large portion of the garden is allowed to lie idle and grow up to weeds. The best gardeners keep all of their rich soil working to its limit from early spring till late fall. As soon as one crop matures and is removed another is quickly planted to take its place.

It is simply wonderful what a common farm garden of rich soil will grow in one season if all of the soil is kept busy all the time. Where all the space is run to cultivated crops through the growing season the garden is an attractive place, and no part of it becomes hard and baked in dry weather as where patches are neglected after the first short crops have been harvested.

It is easily possible to grow three or four good crops in the garden from the same space in one season through planting a succession of crops. From spaces where early lettuce, radishes, peas and such early quick maturing crops have grown other quick or standard maturing crops may follow immediately as soon as they have been removed. Beans, carrots, beets, sweet corn, cucumbers and others, for example, may follow lettuce, radishes and peas. Bunch beans may follow bunch beans in the same ground for at least three crops during the year.

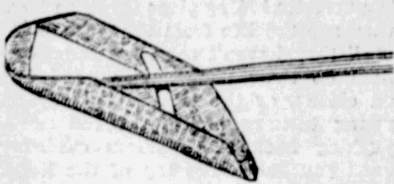

In many cases, as with early bunch beans, sweet corn may be planted between the rows to be up and ready for cultivation as soon as the early crop of beans is out of the way. The soil is working all of the time, and other planting between rows may be done with a variety of crops. Tomatoes are often started between sweet corn rows to be ready for blossoming and fruiting as soon as the sweet corn is ready to eat, when the stalks are removed to let in light to the tomato vines.

By keeping all the garden space stirred and fresh for seeding it is possible to make a succession of plantings of several good crops to have them for use for a long season. By planting sweet corn, for example, early in the spring and then a couple of short rows about every two weeks till the middle of summer it is possible to have sweet corn for table use for several months during the summer and fall. Sweet corn may be planted at intervals from April to the last of July and bunch beans during the same time. Radishes may be sown and coming on for use in a fresh state from March till the last of September in central latitudes.

It is impossible here to enumerate all of the good things that can be had fresh from the garden during the middle of the summer and through the fall months by keeping all the vacant spaces seeded and through seeding or setting out plants between rows of crops that will soon be out of the way. The good garden is the one that is full of spring, midsummer and fall crops growing and ripening continually in abundance.

Cleaning Out Trenches.

Nail a piece of heavy sheet iron fifteen inches long to the curved surface of a short half round piece of wood.

Bore a hole in the block to receive a long handle. Make the hole slant about 45 degrees. This makes a very satisfactory implement for shoveling loose earth out of ditches.—Farm and Home.

EGGS FOR THE MARKET.

Produce the infertile egg. Infertile eggs are produced by hens having no male birds with them. Removing the male bird has no influence on the number of eggs laid by the hens.

The hen's greatest profit producing period is the first and second years, and unless a hen is an exceptionally good breeder she should be disposed of at the end of her second laying season and before starting to molt.

Few eggs can be expected until the pullets are matured.

If possible mark the pullets that lay in the fall and use them in the breeding pen for the following spring.

Soft shelled eggs are often caused by fowls being confined, becoming over-fat and from lack of mineral matter.

Uniform products command the best prices. Pure bred fowls produce uniform products.

Begin marketing the cockerels as soon as they weigh one and one-half pounds or attain a marketable weight.

Market white shelled and brown shelled eggs in separate packages.

When selling eggs to the country merchant or cash buyer insist that the transaction be on a quality basis.

Ship or deliver eggs twice or three times weekly.

Small or dirty eggs should be used at home.

When taking eggs to market they should be protected from the sun's rays.

Infertile eggs will withstand marketing conditions much better than fertile eggs.

The Game of Golf.

A Possible Solution.

"How can a man be as stupid as that fellow and live?"

"Some of the men at the club have a theory that he was raised on a vacuum bottle."—Judge.

The Reason.

"I say, why did you name that dog of yours Gossip?"

"Because he's such a backbiter."—Baltimore American.

PROFESSOR SHEPARD AND SOME OF HIS WIRELESS APPARATUS.

TUFTS PROFESSOR INVENTS NEW WIRELESS APPARATUS.

At the left is Professor B. K. Shepard and his little wireless control box. In the center a small boat which he steers by wireless and at the right, a few of the mechanism worked by the wireless.

Medford, Mass., Aug. 9.—Professor B. K. Shepard, of this city, a member of the faculty of Tufts College, has invented a new wireless apparatus which he now uses to steer a seven foot boat, an auto, fire a cannon, blow horns, ring bell and perform other remarkable feats. In Professor Shepard's apparatus there is no ground wire as in the Hammond invention. He is now working on a wireless submarine destroyer. An advantage of this invention is that in case the torpedo misses its mark it can be steered back to the sender and used again.

MENKE'S DAILY
SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, Aug. 9.—Vic Sailer, of the Cubs, reminds one of the French army. He really accomplishes wonderful things but he rarely gets his name or picture anywhere but in the box score. The spotlight rarely shines upon the wonderful first sack-er from Chicago, because lesser stars monopolize it. Yet, Sailer is one of the greatest players the game has produced.

Sailer is the leading cloutier of the Cubs. He is slugging them out for an average well above .300. He is the most terrific slugger in the National League. He has poled out more two baggers and triplers than any man in the National League. He is fourth among the base stealers and he beats the run getters in the National League.

And he's a fielder, as polished and as sure as Hal Chase in his palmist days. Yet the skill of Sailer has been shoved into the background year after year.

Moral—Don't Flirt.

Two very pretty New York girls were pinched in Chicago recently on the charge of having pilfered a suit case. This was their alibi:

"Two men flirted with us. We turned around and waved at them and then, without really looking, we picked up a suit case and started away from the station. We thought it was our suit case—but it wasn't."

Walloping Umpires Costly.

These surely be palatial times.
Three Fed players soaked an umpire recently and were assessed a total of $450 in fines. Times surely have changed. Back in the old days—those of the Orioles, Spiders and the like, a player who soaked an umpire became the town hero.

Ban "In Bad" Again.

Fanning Ban Johnson has become an outdoor as well as an indoor sport in Toledo, Ohio.

Ban leaped against a banquet
table while in Toledo some months ago and murmured something about:
"Any time Toledo wants to get back its ball club I stand ready to put $25,000 into the deal."

Toledo took Ban at his word. The townfolk raised a large flock of dough and made plans to bring back the club in the American Association which was transferred to Cleveland two years ago. All the transfer details were ready. Toledo was happy.
It was going to have its club back.

All that was needed to complete the deal was for Ban to "come through with that $25,000." Did Ban
"come through?" No. Ban did not,
and you can bet on it that if Ban ever goes to Toledo again he'll have to buy his own eats and drinks.
Toledo will banquet him no more.

Colorado Insures Umpires.

Baseball umpires in Colorado who are killed while on duty will be worth $2,500 to their widows or orphans. Umpires whose knobs are clubbed with a pop bottle, whose noses are busted or who are otherwise injured while performing um-pirical chores, will get compensation according to the seriousness of the ailment.

Colorado last week put in force its workmen's compensation law and this law includes umpires among the list of workmen who are entitled to its benefits.

Connie's Amazing Stand.

It is costing the "money-mad"
Connie Mack just $25,000 to be stubborn.

"Home Run" Baker says he won't play again with the Athletics. Connie knows he won't, yet Connie refuses to take the $25,000 that the White Sox and Yankees have offered him for Baker's contract.

Baker is of no use to Mack and Mack can get $25,000 for him, yet he won't sell.

What do you make of it, Watson?

Automobile Hits Trolley Car.

A large touring car traveling along Washington avenue from Lucas avenue collided with a trolley car as it turned the corner of Washington avenue and North Front street shortly after 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Both the automobile and the trolley were going slowly and the impact did little damage to the automobile except damaging the headlights and the fender. The car was owned and driven by L. J. Davis of New York city, who had with him his two small daughters, one of whom received a cut on the lip.

That Fixed Gaze.

When a woman gazes fixedly at her husband it doesn't necessarily mean that she is admiring either his manly form or his noble features. The chances are that she is looking him over in an effort to discover grease spots on his clothing.—Topeka Cap-
